

YOUR OPPORTUNITY

- Would your university like to develop its international profile and enter new fields of international cooperation?
- Is your organization currently looking for training opportunities for young leaders, academic personnel and project managers working in international branch offices?

OUR VISION

The Center for Global Politics (CGP) offers intensive summer school options for future young leaders from academia, business and administration, as well as the civil society sector.

- Participants of Global Politics (GP) Summer Schools develop a focused understanding of today's global issues in specially tailored modules.
- The individual programs will be developed in close cooperation with our partner institutions, in summer school formats ranging in average from one to two weeks in duration.
- GP Summer Schools allow participants to benefit from the CGP's broad and long-standing experience in international education formats and the outstanding expertise of excellent tutors.
- Participants will become part of a network of international young professionals while bringing in their respective experience.

PROGRAM COMPONENTS

Depending on our partners' preferences, the following program components can be offered:

- Practice-oriented modules developing participants' international negotiation skills and fostering their understanding of global dynamics and multilateral cooperation;
- Theory-based courses covering innovative approaches to international relations and political science for dealing with today's global challenges;
- Roundtable discussions with international experts and decision-makers from politics and economy.

SYLLABUS – CONTENT ON DEMAND

ABOUT US

The GP Summer Schools are part of the Center for Global Politics that coordinates international graduate study programs. The programs of the Center for Global Politics are designed for professionals and young leaders who wish to deepen their understanding of 21st century's global challenges and its political, economic and social causes and impacts. Our unique programs explore international relations in Europe, including politics, economics, intercultural communication, migration, conflict management and international security.

The Center for Global Politics is part of Freie Universität (FU) Berlin. FU Berlin is one of the leading universities in Germany and distinguishes itself through its modern and international character. FU Berlin was recently awarded the label "University of Excellence."

During GP Summer Schools in Berlin students will have the opportunity to get to know Germany's capital. Many organizations have branches in Berlin – and students will have a chance to directly get in touch with them.

GP Summer School students will gain access to our state-of-the-art learning management system which will allow them to immerse themselves in comprehensive learning combining self-study and interactive elements online with in-house classes. The modules integrate multimedia so as to provide an exciting, challenging learning experience.
